Betnils of the Disaster to the Golden Gate.

The following is a copy of the statement of Captain Hudson, of the Golden Gate, to the Parific Mail Steamship Com-

Mashville Auion.

DAMA PROOK, per munimany and in $5.00

GENERALISE: I have to report to you the total loss of the Golden Gate, by fire, which occurred on the afternoon of the 27th instant, fifteen miles to the westward of Manzanilla. At five in the afternoon, when at dinner, the ship was reported to be on fire. I immediately arose from the tabe, requesting the passengers to remain quiet, and proceeded to the spar deck, when I found a dense volume of smoke coming up from the en-gine room batchway. All the fire hose of the ship were immediately put in re-quisition and worked with all possible The ship was now about three or four miles from the land. I saw at a giance the impossibility of subduing the flames and immediately put the helm up to run the ship ashore. Men, women, and children were now ordered forward, and probably one bundred had reached the forecastle, when the flames spread with such rapidity as to cut off all communication with the after part of the ship. I ordered Mr. Waddell, the chief engineer, to keep the engine moving as long as possible. All regular communication with the engine room was cut off in a few minutes by the flames. Several of the fireman and engineers were still below. The feed valves of the boilers and furnace doors were opened wide, and all precautions used to prevent explosion. So rapid was the spread of the flames, however, that the engineers and their men barely escaped with their lives, by forcing a passage through the after frieght room bulkhead. At balf past five we grounded about three hundred yards from the beach, where there was a heavy surf breaking. Before reaching the shore the after boats lowered away and filled with passengers, under charge of my chief officer, Mr. Nolan, who remained by the ship, rendering all possible aid in saving life. In the meantime, life preservers, spars, and everything of a buoy-ant nature, were furnished to the passengers, thrown overboard after she

The flame spread with such rapidity that the burricane dock, from the foremast att, fell with a tremendous crash before reaching the shore, and soon afterwards the foremast went by the board. The heat had now become so intense as to compel all who remained to leave the burning wreck by lowering themselves in the water with lines turnished for that purpose; and many had thrown themselves into the water from various parts of the ship. After all had left, Captain Pearson and myself dropped from the bowsprit, and succeeded with great difficulty in reaching the beach. I think about eighty had reached the shore with All that remained visible of the ship at S P. M. was her engines, boilers, and wheel frames. At daylight on the fol-lowing morning, the 23th July, we found and buried sixteen bodies, and at 8 A.M. we started for Manzanilla, and at noon we reached the terminus of the beach. about five miles from the wreck, and found the roads impassable from the density of the chaparral or brushwood. At S.P. M. a boat hove in sight, with which we communicated and sent to Nanzanilla for relief. On the morning of the 29th two of our boats reached us and reported that they had saved sixty-four passen-The St. Louis, touching at Manzanilla early the same morning, and hearing of our disaster, came to our assistance and rescued those who had remained with me on the beach. We had, on feaving San Francisco, two hundred and forty passengers and ninety-six crew. There now remain seventy-two passengers and sixty-two crew, making our loss and missing, some of whom may yet be found two hundred and four. Captain Lapidge will remain at this port till to-morrow evening, the 20th inst., for the purpose of searching still further for missing passengers. From the shelving beach and heavy serf where the ship is lying there remains little or no probability, in my opinion, of saving the treasure. I shall remain, how ever, as agent of the underwriters, with a portion of my crew and officers, for its protection, and with the hope, also, of being able to save additional life. Orders from you will reach me through the house of Ostling & Co., of Manzanilla. by sections will be excised on horselver by M. and coolness of my officers and crew I cannot say too much of the efficiency under the trying circumstances through which they have passed. Very respectfully, &c., W. W. HUDSON. Messes. Formes & Bancock, Agents Pacific Mall Steamship Company, San

. J. IL MERCHELL'S ACCOUNT. I was a passenger on the steamer Golden date. The alarm of fire was given while all the passengers were at dinner. There appeared to be very, little excitement at first, and I supposed the fire would be soon extinguished. Then I saw the first mate come along, and he got out the small one-and-a-half-inch hose used for washing decks forward. This was the only hose I saw in service. All the steamer hands and passengers went to work at the pumps forward—as many as could got at the brakes. I went from the pumps up on the herricane deck, saw Captain Hudson on the bridge trying to quiet the passengers, telling them there was no danger, the fire would be very soon extinguished, merchant of this city for several years, and not to get excited, &c.

While I was on the hurricane deck, the first officer, came along and told savhand, and I saked where the water was to be had. He made no reply to this, but passed on below to the main deck. I naw him no more on the steamer, and supposed that he, finding the effect was of no avail, went aft and get the boats out (three in number,) where he was very actively employed in naving the passen-The steamer at this time, was turned heading towards the beach (about three or four miles distant,) the wheel lashed, and the engines kept in motion, I was afterwards told on shore by the second engineer (first and second engineers were both saved) that the engineer who was on duty at the time of the burning of the steamer was lost. By this time there was a great deal of excitement aboard. Many of the passengers jumped overhourd, others were throwing chairs, benches, planks, &c., over to assist in the effort to save their lives. The forward boat was lowered, I believe, by some of the passengers. It was crowded, there being some twenty-five or thirty in it, a number of them ladies. That boat was struck by the wheel as it reached the water, before the tackle was cast off, and swamped. The weather was fine; had been warm all the day, and the sea was calm. There was a slight land breeze, nothing more. In about fifteen or twenty minutes after the alarm was given the steamer struck the beach. By this time her whole upper works, from siem to stern, was a sheet of flame, with the exception of a small space forward of about lifteen feet, where the passengers who were yet on board, to the number of nearly one hundred, I should judge, were crowded to-gether, some clinging to the rall, to the chains, wherever they could obtain a hold or a footing. At the moment of our striking the beach, the wheels of the steamer stopped. I slided down a rope into the water and swam for the shore, about one hundred and fifty yards distant. I picked up a tin life-preserver, which assisted in buoying me up a little, but lost it again in the surf. There were about twenty men who had reached the shore ahead of me. The number who got to land at this point was about eighty, of whom there was only one woman, Mrs. Wallace. There was a number of women in the crowd gathered forward, before mentioned. The bents that left the steamer went off towards the port of Manzanilla, about twelve miles distant. Captain Pearson, Captain Hudson, and the Purser all got ashore at the place where I did. After getting safely ashere myself, I number were drowned, and some thrown sahore by the action of the surf. We buried sixteen bodies the following morning. The steamer was burned so as to break to pieces by nine o'clock that even-The engines, beams, &c., stood there, black and gaunt, like a skeleton. We laid on the beach huddled together (the weather growing cool before morning) to keep warm, as many of us were without clothes and well nigh exhausted. In the morning we started afoot for Mansanilla. About six miles from where we started we found water. Here the party divided. About forty of us started to make the port by going across the mountains; the others, including Mrs. Wallace, Captain Hudson, and Captain Pearson, remained at the watering-place close to the beach. They afterwards went around the point, and were relieved by Mr. Nolan, in one of the steamer's boats next morning (Tuesday). We remained in the mountains all of Monday night with nothing to eat, but had plenty of water from the springs we found there.

Manzanilla, thinking it could not be much further off, and, after traveling about two hours, we heard a signal gun-fired from the St. Louis. This was the first intimation we had of there being a steamer near at hand. Some of the party climbed the trees, and from thence saw the beach and the steamer St. Louis. We then divided and made our way, some direct to the heach and others towards the steamer. The steamer went on toward Mancanilla. leaving her bosts and several cances, manned by Mexicans, to pick up and carry all the wrecked passengers of the Golden Gate they could find at various points along shore, from the place of disaster down to Manzanilla. When we were taken into the beats we procured something to eat, as they had supplied turnished from the St. Louis. On Tuesday afternoon we reached the steamer at Manzanilla. The passengers of the St. Louis were very kind in their sasistance to us, furnishing the destitute with clothing, and so forth. Incidents. - Captain James Whitney, Jr., was one of the passengers who safely swam through the raging surf to the beach. He once reached fordable water, but a reflux wave hurled him back again. On gaining term firms he was very much exhausted, and some time elapsed before he recovered his consciousness. A number of females also survived this trying ordeal of the breakers, but it nearly cost all of them their lives.

John Henry Rooth, a lad of ten years. jumped overboard about ten minutes after the fire broke out, . He swam to a boat in which his grandmother and others had secured places; but the boat being full he struck off for another not yet ülfeil. He was taken in and safely landed, while the other boat, containing his grandmoth-er and Mrs. McMullen (the only persons he knew in her,) in attempting to leave the side of the vessel, was struck by the paddle and swamped. The bodies of the boy's grandmother and Mrs. McMullen were washed ashere and buried, side by side. On arriving here the boy was taken in charge by Mr. David Ferris, furnished with a new suit of clothes throughout, and taken to his home, where he is kindly provided for.

Henry Gerstongs, who was lost with his wife and child, had been a German doing business on California street near Sansome. He was universally respected. which was but a few minutes, Mr. Noian, His close attention to business and honest dealing had been rewarded, accord-ing to enmor, by the acquisition of a com-fortable fortune, and he was returning to eral of the men (passengers) to form in ling to comor, by the acquisition of a com-line and stand by to pass buckets of wa-ter on the fire. The buckets were at his native land to spend his days there in peace and quiet.

Charles J. Theis, who is reported as among the lost, was a German, and one of the firm of Theis & Knibbe, importers of dry goods, on Montgomery street.

The irreparable loss sentained by Mr. McMullen, in the death of his wife and two children, is indeed terrible. These melancholy casualties have cast a deep gloom over a very large circle of sympahizing friends. But the whole city is plunged into deep grief. Scarcely a citien but has lost an intimate friend, or at least an acquaintance, and some those nearest and dearest to them on earth. No such distressing event, with perhaps the single exception of the calas-trophe to the Central America, has ever befallen this community. Heaven grant that we may never be called upon again to chronicle so sire a calamity.

A Terrible Lesson on Unarding Rebel Property ice of the Cincinnati Commercial Sr. Louis, August 9, 1862, It was on that terrible march of Curtis' army from Batesville to Helena. Both the land routes for commissary supplies, by way of Rolla and by way of Pilot Knob, had been closed in anticipation of an immediate opening of White river by the gun-boats, and a transportation of supplies by water. When this enterprise failed, you remember, here was a large army far inland, in an enemy's country, that must double-quick for subsistence, or starve in the forests of Arkansas. For there was nothing like a sufficiency of provisions in that wild country for such a host; and even if there had been, an appropriation of them would not have been adjudged constitu-tional. So this jaded, harassed, hungry army made straight for the Mississippi

as for salvation

it was on this terrible march. I have the story from a reliable man, who was with the expedition as a camp-follower. The division of Steele was proceeding a day in advance of the division of Osterhaus. This noble army of the Union, with the battle glory of Pea Ridge yet fresh upon it, scars and wounds of guerrillas all over it, worn out, half-starved. still kept its columns, straggling into no pantry, cellar, or barn-yard, but holding sacred the private property of the rebel enemy, and even guarding it when remested, against any danger of violation Steele's division, chanced in its line of march, upon a settlement of thirty slavholders-five or six mansions in succesassisted in getting others to land. A sion, at intervals of a plantation apartwho avowed themselves secessionists and asked for a guard to protect their possessions against the pillage of such stragglors as might, for the moment, forget the New Testament mode of wariare, and hate the enemy according to the old Mosaic dispensation, down in Egypt. A guard was promptly detailed, consisting of a sergeant and one soldier for the first mansion, and two soldiers for each of the others, to remain on duty till the division (Osterhaus') should arrive.

guards went to their posts, and the marching columns passed on. Next morning, the advance of the division (Osterhaus') came up, and the speciacle that smote them in the face at the first house they reached was almost too horrible for belief. The soldier of the guard lay in the yard, killed and brutally mangled; and the sergeant was hanging by the heels from the highest imb of a tree near by, with twenty-one bullet holes through his body! From defiant and scornful hints of the she devils of the house, it was manifest that Tuesday morning we started again for the male members of the protected family had helped to perpetrate this incredi-ble crime, and then had fied with their associates! The guard at each of the other houses, too, had been made way with as prisoners, the women said and the male inmates had all disappeared. Observe that the sentiment of the division (Osterhaus') then went back to the Old Testament doctrine, of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth! commander could not have controlled that sentiment if he had desired. I know Osterhaus, and I do not believe he de sired. Abraham Lincoln himself could not have quashed proceedings then, how-ever firmly he had "put his foot down." There was only the one punishment available. "Remove the women and childran " And the snapping, hungry flames set upon and gobbled up every restige of human habitation there, and licked each plantation as clean as a new prairie.

When the rebels returned, I presume they found, in the ruins of their peaceful abodes, a monatrons violation of the constitution!—an utter disregard of the asages of civilized warfare! But they smelt a wholesome lesson, to-wit: that the devil is to be fought with fire. Verily, they shall have a hot gospel preached o them henceforth. The army of the southwest, will, hereafter, temper the warfare with more justice and less mercy. We must crush these rebels, though we have to descend to their arean of fighting to accomplish it. They are found in the very act of high treason, even on their best behavior; they cannot reasonably complain if they are treated as outlaws. But when to high trenson they superadd such monstrous crimes as this, vengeance must be let loose upon them, saith the Lord of Hoste! Madams Alboni recently received an avitation to a ball from a lady moving the first circles of Paris society. The elebrated songetress wrote in reply to squire whether the invitation was addreased to Madame Albeni or to the Countess Popoli, as Alboni charged $200. and that in advance, when she went auc to spend the evening, and the Countess charged nothing. This would be hostess replied that she invited Alboni. Alboni hogged to be excused. Bravo, Alboni !
